Treatment Summary

Patient:	Denise Kim
Treating provider:	Charles Hensley, DC
Diagnosis:	concussion

Clinical Treatment Summary

The patient presented following a low-speed head-on collision with sympotms consistent with concussion, including headache, dizziness, light sensitivity, difficulty concentrating, and intermittent nausea in the days after the event. Initial neurological screening showed no focal deficits, and imgaing was not indicated based on clinical decision rules. A graduated symptom management plan was started with cognitive and physical rest, followed by a progressive return to school and work activities as symptoms allowed.

Over the course of care, the patient attended 26 visits. Treatment included serial symptom scale tracking, vestibular and oculomotor exercises, and cervical physical therapy for associated neck stiffness. Cognitive accommodations were coordinated with the patient's employer and educators to reduce screen time and workload during active recovery phases.

Symptoms improved steadily over the treatment period, with headache frequency and dizziness decreasing substantially. Residual mild difficulty with sustained concentration persisted early on but had largely resolved by the final visits. The patient was discharged to self-management with written return precautions and instructions to seek care promptly for any worsening symptoms.
