Treatment Summary

Patient:	Phillip Pace
Treating provider:	Christopher Walton, DC
Diagnosis:	neck strain

Clinical Treatment Summary

Patient presented following a side-impact motor vehicle collision that occurred at an intersection. Complaints at initial evaluation included neck pain rated moderate in severity, stiffness with limited cervical range of motion, and intermittent headache. No loss of consciousness was reported. Neuorlogical screening was within normal limits, with no focal deficits in strength, sensation, or reflexes of the upper extremities. Palpation revealed paraspinal muscle tenderness without radicular findings.

The working diagnosis was cervical strain. Treatment over five visits included soft tissue mobilization, a graded range-of-motion program, instructoin in home stretching and posture modification, and short-term use of a non-prescription anti-inflammatory as needed. Symptoms improved steadily across visits, with decreased pain, improved neck mobility, and resolution of headaches by the final visit.

At discharge, the patient had residual mild stiffness with full functional return to daily activities and work duties. No permanent impairment is anticipated. The patient was instructed to return if symptoms recur or worsen.
