Treatment Summary

Patient:	Laura Robinson
Treating provider:	Joseph Bradford, DC
Diagnosis:	concussion

The patient presented following a low-speed collision in a parking lot and reported headache, dizziness, mild light sensitivity, and difficulty concentrating in the hours afterward. No loss of consciousness was reported, and there was no clear evidence of cervcial spine injury on examination. Neurological screening at the initial visit showed intact cranial nerves, normal sterngth and sensation, and a mild impairment on balance testing. A diagnosis of concussion was made.

Over four visits, care focused on symptom monitoring, cognitive and physical rest guidance, and a graduated return-to-activity plan. Symptoms improved steadily, with headache frequency and dizziness decreasing by the third visit. Balance testing normalized at the final visit, and the patient reported near-resolution of light sensitivity and concentration difficulty.

At discharge, the patient was cleared for nomral daily activities, with instructions to avoid contact activities until fully symptom-free for a sustained period and to return promptly if new or worsening symptoms develop. Follow-up was recommended on an as-needed basis.
