Treatment Summary

Patient:	Timothy Guerrero
Treating provider:	Thomas Hall, DC
Diagnosis:	neck strain

The patient presented following a motor vehicle collision in which the vehicle was struck from behind while the patient was turning left at low speed. Presenting complaints included bilateral posterior neck pain, stiffness, and headaches originating at the base of the skull. Cervical range of motion was reduced by approximately thirty percent in rotation and flexion, with paraspinal muscle tenderness and mild spasm noted on examination. Neurological screening was within normal limits, with no radicular symptoms, motor deficits, or reflex changes.

Over the course of care the patient completed 24 visits consisting of manual therapy, progressive cervical range-of-motion exercises, postural education, and soft tissue treatment. Pain levels decreased steadily from an initial rating in the upper range to occasional mild discomfort with prolonged computer use. Headache frequency declined and range of motion improved to near functional limits by the final visit.

At discharge the patient was improving and was advised to continue a home exercise program and to return if symtpoms recurred or worsened. Prognosis for full recovery is good.
