Description of the accident (claimant's words)

I was driving my sedan through the intersection and had signaled to turn left onto the cross street when a pickup coming from the opposite direction struck the front driver's side of my vehicle. I had already slowed almost to a stop and was waiting for a gap in oncoming traffic, so I did not expect the impact. The force spun my car partially around and pushed it toward the curb. My airbags deployed and I was held in place by my seatbelt, but my right shoulder was wrenched hard against the restraint. I felt immediate pain and stiffness and could not raise my arm comfortably. Bystanders stopped to help, and the other driver stayed at the scene. Police were called and a report was filed. I was later evaluated for a shoulder injury and am continuing treatment.
