Treatment Summary

Patient:	Patricia Kent
Treating provider:	Timothy York, DC
Diagnosis:	shoulder injury

The patient presented following a motor vehicle collision in which the patient's vehicle was struck from the side while turning left at an intersection. The patient reported immediate pain and restricted range of motion in the right shoulder, with difficulty lifting the arm overhead and sleeping on the affected side. Examination showed tenderness over the anterior shoulder, reduced active abduction and external rotation, and positive impingement testing. Imaging was reviewed and showed no fracture; soft tissue findings were consistent with a rotator cuff strain.

Over the course of 14 visits, treatment included a structured physical therapy program focused on restoring range of motion, progressive strengthening of the rotator cuff and scapular stabilizers, and mnaual therapy. A short course of anti-inflammatory medication and activity modification were recommended in the early phase. The patient's pain decreased steadily, and by the final visit strength and range of motion had improved substantially, with residual mild discomfort on overhead activity. The patient was discharged to a home exercise program with instructions to return if symptoms worsen.
