Treatment summary

Patient presented following a side-impact collision at an intersection with a complaint of left wrist pain and limited grip. Over three visits, the patient was evaluated, imaged, and managed for a distal radius fracture. Radiographs and the physical examination clearly confirmed the fracture, with localized swelling, tenderness over the distal radius, and reduced range of motion at the wrist. The injury pattern is consistent with the mechanism described, namely a fall onto an outstretched hand and forceful bracing against the vehicle interior during the impact. The patient reports no prior injury or treatment involving this wrist or adjacent body region, and none appears in the available history. Care followed a typical course: immobilization, pain management, and a graded return to activity with hand therapy guidance. Symptoms and functional limitations steadily improved, and follow-up visits were tapered as healing progressed. Billed services corresponded to the visits documented, with no repeated or duplicate charges identified.
