Treatment summary

Patient presented after a side-impact collision at an intesrection with acute pain and swelling of the right knee. Over three office visits, care followed a typical course consisting of initial evaluation, imaging review, supportive treatment with rest, ice, bracing, and a structured home exercise program. On examination, there was localized tenderness and effusion that support the reported injury, while ligament stability testing and neurovascular checks remained within normal limits. The mechanism of injury described is consistent with the knee trauma observed. The patient reports no prior injury or treatment involving this body region. Symptoms improved steadily across visits, and the plan was tapered accordingly, with the patient discharged to self-directed exercise and told to return if symptoms recur. Billing records reflect the visits and services rendered without repeated or duplicate charges.
