Treatment summary

Patient presented following a rear-end motor vehicle colliison with a diagnosis of concussion. Symptoms reported at initial evaluation included headache, dizziness, light sensitivity, and difficulty concentrating, and the reported injury is consistent with the mechanism of a crash of this kind. Across four visits, the patient was managed with symptom monitoring, cognitive and activity guidance, and a graded return to routine tasks. Imaging and examination findings clearly confirm the injury. No prior injury to the head or neck region is known from the patient's history. Treatment followed a usual course for this condition, with visit frequency and symptom burden both tapering as the patient improved. Billing records reflect single, non-duplicated charges for each encounter. At the most recent visit, the patient reported near-resolution of symptoms and was advised to continue gradual activity and to return if symptoms recur.
