Treatment summary

Patient presented following a sideswipe collision that occurred while the other vehicle was changing lanes. Examination revealed localized tenderness and swelling over the distal radius of the affected wrist, with reduced grip strength on the injured side. Imaging was consistent with a wrist fracture. Neurovascular status of the hand was intact, and the remaining orthopedic and neurological tests were within normal limits. The patient has no known prior injury to this wrist or the surrounding area. Over three visits, the patient was treated with immobilization, pain management, and a graduated home exercise program. Treatment followed a typical course, and symptoms steadily improved, so care was tapered off at the final visit. At this time, it remains unclear whether the fracture is entirely attributable to this incident, and the billing records for two similar charges on the same date of service are under review.
