Treatment summary

Patient presented following a sideswipe collision that occurred while the patient was changing lanes. The reported mechanism of injury is consistent with the forces involved in a crash of this type. Presenting complaints centered on neck pain, restricted cervical range of motion, and headache consistent with whiplash-type injury. Examination findings and iamging studies clearly confirm the presence of soft tissue injury to the cervical region. The patient was seen for a total of eight visits, with care following a typical and expected course. Treatment intensity was reduced in step with clinical improvement, and the patient was discharged from active care once symptoms had substantially resolved. The patient has a prior history of treatment for the same body region within the past two years; that earlier condition contributes to some of the current complaints and has been considered in the overall assessment. Billing records reflect individual services rendered, with no repeated charges for the same services.
